

LOWELL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL ▲

This is the way the new Lowell School looked when it opened in 1951. Perched on the hill at 5010 View Drive, it offered a marvelous vista of the valley and mountains from every classroom. Sidney Douglas served as the first principal. The architect was William Arild Johnson. Newland Construction Company erected the building at a cost of approximately $520,000. The building has seen several changes over the years. More classrooms were added in 1957 and an entire new pitched roof was erected in 1989. Four more classrooms were opened in 1991 as the first phase in a major addition and modernization program.
